Pat Williams

He Runs The Show For Bulls

Pat Williams, the Chicago Bulls' new executive vice president and general manager, brings "the Bill Veeck touch" to professional basketball.

A meeting with Veeck inspired Williams, 29, to embark on a career in the business end of sports. The decision proved wise for the former minor league baseball catcher as a front office executive.

Williams came to the Bulls from the Philadelphia 76ers, where he served as the highly-successful business manager. His promotional ability spurred the 76ers to a new all-time gate mark last year.

But this was nothing new. Williams had displayed the same "golden touch" as president and general manager of the Spartanburg (S.C.) Phillies in the Class A Western Carolina baseball league.

THERE HE BROKE every Class A attendance record in professional baseball history and was named executive of the year for three straight seasons.

His ability was recognized by baseball's bible, The Sporting News, which named him minor league executive of the year in 1961.

A graduate of Wake Forest College, Williams was signed to a bonus contract by the Philadelphia Phillies. During his minor league career, Williams played with current big league stars Ferguson Jenkins of the Chicago Cubs, Alex Johnson of the Cincinnati Reds and Jeff James of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Dick Motta

A Coach Who Likes To Run

Coach Dick Motta of the Chicago Bulls will be his "own man" this year as he serves his second season as a National Basketball Association coach.

Pat Williams, the energetic new general manager and executive vice president of the Bulls, has given Motta a voice in shaping the club's roster, and Motta has taken advantage of it to build the "running" team he has long sought.

Motta is extremely pleased with the new arrangement.

"We should have an exciting team all year long," he insists.

MOTTA CAME TO the Bulls a year ago after a highly-successful coaching career at Weber State College, Ogden, Utah. His teams there won 80 per cent of their games.

They captured six Big Sky Conference titles in nine years and compiled a 12-year record of 237 victories against 64 defeats.

A proponent of fast-break, power basketball, Motta feels the Bulls are better prepared than ever before to play this brand of basketball during the 1969-70 season.

A stickler for conditioning, Motta works his players hard . . . but not any harder than he drives himself.

MOTTA, 37, WAS born in Medvale, Utah, and graduated from Utah State University. He coached at Grace (Ida.) Junior High School, served two years as an officer in the U. S. Air Force and did graduate work at Colorado State and Utah State, where he earned his Masters degree.

Motta and his wife, the former Janice Fraser, reside in Northbrook. They have two sons and a daughter.

There's a New Look To Bulls This Year!

The 1969-70 season represents "a whole new ball game" for the Chicago Bulls.

The start of their fourth season in the National Basketball Association found the Bulls performing with dynamic new leadership in the front office and exciting new personnel on the basketball court.

Making the front-office decisions was youthful, energetic Pat Williams, the club's executive vice president and general manager.

New blood in the arena included veteran Chet Walker and stars with a future like Bob Kauffman, Walt Wesley and Shaler Halimon.

KAUFFMAN, 6-foot-8, 250-pound pro sophomore, was obtained from the Seattle Supersonics in exchange for Bob Boozer and Barry Clemens. Walker and Halimon came from the Philadelphia 76ers in the trade that sent Jimmy Washington winging to Philly.

Boozer led the Bulls with a 21.7 average last year, while Washington contributed 14 points a game. While Walker scored at an 18-point pace for the 76ers, Kauffman could muster only a 7.8 mark for Seattle and Halimon managed only 3.7 for Philly in a short tour before he was called to duty by Uncle Sam.

But the Bulls weren't interested in adding them to the roster on the basis of what they did last year, but for what they are capable of doing. Their speed excites Bulls coach Dick Motta.

"THE ENTHUSIASM and hustle that these men project is just fantastic," Motta said.

As Motta said this, he could envision a lineup that stationed 7-foot pro sophomore Tom Boerwinkle at center, Walker and Kauffman in the corners and steady Jerry (Spider) Sloan and Clem (The Gem) Haskins at the guard positions.

Sloan averaged 16.8 points a game last year while earning NBA All-Star status.

Haskins and Boerwinkle contributed 17.2 and 9.8 points respectively to the Bulls' cause. But perhaps of more importance was the fact that Haskins gained confidence in his ability to play NBA basketball, while Boerwinkle learned some of the tricks that pro pivots must use to supplement their brute strength.

The Bulls surprised the pro world by compiling 33-48 and 29-53 records in their first two pro years and qualifying for the playoffs.

But last year, despite the fact they matched the number of wins they posted in their freshman year by fashioning a 33-49 log, they finished fifth in the NBA's Western Division and missed the postseason playoffs.

But it's a new ball game this year and the Bulls' motto is: "Look out above."

Ben Bentley

'Barnum' Of The Bulls

Once known as the "Barnum of Boxing," Ben Bentley today qualifies as the "Barnum of Pro Basketball," thanks to his affiliation as public relations director of the Chicago Bulls.

Bentley's "Barnum of Boxing" reputation is deserved. During a long and meritorious career as a ring PR man, Bentley helped promote scores of headline boxing cards all over the nation.

He has helped sing the praises of such ring greats as the late Rocky Marciano, Joe Louis, Jersey Joe Walcott, Ezzard Charles, Sonny Liston and Cassius Clay, to name but a few.

NOW HE IS bringing the same zeal and zest to the Bulls and pro basketball. Because of his never-flagging enthusiasm and boundless energy, the Bulls have received wonderful coverage in radio, television and press.

Ben and his wife, Jo, reside in Chicago with daughters Michelle, 10, and Iris, 12.

NBA Story...

In 11 of its 23 years, the story of the National Basketball Association has been the story of the Boston Celtics.

The basketball brigade from Beantown won its 11th championship in 13 years by coming from behind to defeat the Los Angeles Lakers in the finals of the 1968-69 playoff series.

Boston's fabled coach, Red Auerbach, and its many stars, including big Bill Russell and Bob Cousy, helped write some of the most spectacular chapters into the NBA's history.

Today Auerbach is in the Boston front office and Russell has retired from his dual role as player-coach. But Cousy is back where he belongs — in the NBA as coach of the Cincinnati Royals.

And there are more super-stars than ever before in a league that is enjoying its finest hour since it was organized for the 1946-47 season.

EDDIE GOTTLIEB — and that's another storied name for you pro cage buffs — led the Philadelphia Warriors to the first NBA championship that year.

Gottlieb is the first to agree — and emphasize — that vast improvements have been made in shooting accuracy, speeding up of the game, variety of shots, calibre of officiating and the quality of defense since the early days of the NBA.

"Today's game is faster than ever before," Gottlieb says. "Some of the forwards 15 years ago couldn't keep pace now. And they didn't have the shots we see today."

The improvements Gottlieb mentioned have helped make NBA basketball one of the most exciting sports packages there is. It has reached its present popular peak because of the contributions of stars like Cousy and Russell and many more, both of present day and past vintage.

Excitement

In the league's early years there were players like Harry Gallatin, Dolph Schayes, Jim Pollard, George Mikan, Joe Fulks — the first superstar — Bob Pettit and Easy Ed Macauley, to name a few.

TODAY'S SUPERSTARS are fellows like Wilt (The Stilt) Chamberlain, John Havlicek, Elgin Baylor, Oscar Robertson, Nate Thurmond, Jerry West, Jerry Lucas, Elvin Hayes, Earl Monroe and Westley Unseld.

Everywhere they go, they pack in the fans.

The Lakers' Chamberlain is the NBA's all-time scoring leader with 27,098 career points. He led the league last year in field goal shooting percentage, .583, and rebounds, 1,712, an amazing average of 21.1 per game.

Hayes, San Diego's "Big E," became the first rookie since Chamberlain did it in 1960 to lead the NBA in scoring. He finished with 2327 points.

Boston's Havlicek is deservedly recognized as one of the greatest competitors in league history. Cincinnati's Robertson, who led the NBA in assists with 772 last season, is a peerless playmaker.

This is the year, too, that saw 7-footer Lew Alcindor of UCLA fame, make his debut in professional basketball as a member of the Milwaukee Bucks.

These players — and others like them who abound on all team rosters — have generated the interest and enthusiasm that have helped make NBA basketball a true sports spectacular.

Walter Kennedy

The Top Man Has the Touch

It took more than the proverbial "luck of the Irish" to make Notre Dame graduate Walter Kennedy an unqualified success as commissioner of the National Basketball Association.

And Kennedy has been a five-star success since he took over the NBA reins from Maurice Podoloff in 1963.

The record shows that the NBA has experienced record growth during "the Kennedy years." Attendance has doubled, the number of teams has increased from nine to 14 and the worth of franchises has multiplied tenfold.

This represents more than luck. Much of the success has resulted from Kennedy's tough-minded, yet tactful, approach to business operations.

HE ALSO HAS put to good use such God-given attributes as patience and a sense of humor and a high-level code of business ethics. Kennedy also has brought to his job a combination of skills seldom found in one person.

He has a thorough knowledge of professional basketball. He knows marketing strategy and mass communications and he understands human behavior.

A resident of Stamford, Conn., Kennedy graduated from Notre Dame in 1934 and also studied at Yale and New York University. He was named athletic director and basketball coach at St. Basil's Preparatory School in Stamford, and in 1943 became director of publicity at Notre Dame.

In 1946, he became the first public relations director of the Basketball Association of America, forerunner of the NBA. Kennedy also served as vice president of the Scholastic Sports Institute and gained business experience as an employee of the Macmillan Publishing Co. in New York.

THE NBA COMMISSIONER also has been a newspaper reporter, a high school and semi-pro basketball official, consultant for 10 years to the famed Harlem Globetrotters and an affiliate of Little League and Babe Ruth League baseball programs.

Kennedy also has dabbled successfully in politics. He was elected mayor of Stamford, population 104,000, in 1959, winning office by a 2-to-1 margin and with the largest vote total and biggest plurality in the city's history.

He was re-elected in 1961 . . . . but the NBA beckoned in '63 and Kennedy heeded its call.

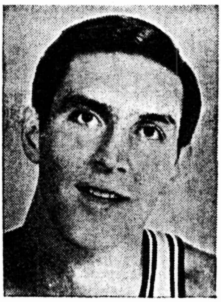
4 JERRY SLOAN 6-5 200 G AGE 27 PRO 5 YRS. EVANSVILLE



When the Chicago Bulls came into existence four years ago, one of the first moves they made was to draft an "unknown", Evansville (Ind.) College's Jerry Sloan, from the Baltimore Bullets in the expansion draft that stocked Chicago's NBA club.

Sloan long since has ceased to be classed as an "unknown." He has coupled shooting ability, superb defensive skill and a fiery competitive spirit to earn a reputation as one of the best guards in pro basketball. His aggressive tactics and courage have made him a favorite of Windy City fans.

Sloan scored 1390 points for the Bulls during the 1966-67 season. He dropped to 1027 the next year, but zoomed to 1309 last winter.

Jerry played his prep ball at McLeansboro (Ill.) High School and earned All-State honors. At Evansville, he was named a small college All-American after leading his team through an unbeaten 1964-65 season.

Sloan has played in three post-season playoffs and two league All-Star games.

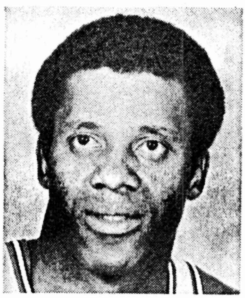
25 CHET WALKER 6-6 220 F AGE 29 PRO 7 YRS. BRADLEY



The Chicago Bulls like to point to a significant fact as one of the reasons behind their acquisition of Chet Walker in exchange for Jimmy Washington. The Bulls liked Walker's ability to deliver in the clutch. The former Bradley University star has averaged 16.2 points a game over seven professional campaigns . . . but he has hiked his production to 18.9 points a game in the pressure-packed post-season playoffs. Walker scored 1,477 points for the Philadelphia 76ers last season. He averaged 18 points a game, marking the seventh straight year he had been in double figures. During Philly's championship 1966-67 season he flirted with the 20-mark, finally settling for a career high 1567 points and a 19.3 average. Walker has scored more than a 1,000 points in all but his rookie NBA year, and then he nearly made it with 957. The Bradley grad is one of the league's best at working his way from the corner, or baseline, one-on-one, against a defender and going to the basket either for a goal or a free throw attempt. He has played in several league all-star games.

11 CLEM HASKINS 6-2 195 G AGE 25 PRO 3 YRS. W. KENTUCKY

They call the Bulls' No. 1 1967-68 draft choice "Clem the Gem," and the Western Kentucky graduate more than lived up to his nickname last winter in his second season of pro ball.

Perhaps a bit too cautious as an NBA freshman, Clem was held to 679 points—an 8.9 average—during the '67-68 campaign. But last winter he blossomed into a prolific scorer and earned a starting berth at guard opposite steady Jerry Sloan.

His 1356 points and 17.2 scoring average in 79 games were surpassed only by the departed Bob Boozer's 1716 points and 21.7 average among players who put in a full campagin with the Bulls.

Of equal importance, Haskins led the club in number of assists, 306, during the season.

During three seasons at Western Kentucky, Haskins scored 1680 points, an all-time school high, and averaged 22.1 points a game, best in school history. He was named player of the year in the Ohio Valley Conference three years in succession.

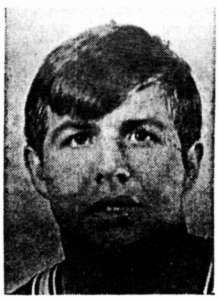
18 TOM BOERWINKLE 7-0 270 C AGE 24 PRO 1 YR. TENNESSEE



At 7 feet and 270 pounds, it could be said that Tennessee's Tom Boerwinkle is tailor-made for the Bulls. The Chicago club made the big brute its No. 1 draft pick last year in the hope that he would provide something it had sorely lacked: Rebounding.

And Boerwinkle did overcome the normal first-year inexperience sufficiently to deliver some of that board strength. Tall, tough Tom picked off 889 rebounds in 80 games to lead the Bulls in that vital department.

It should be remembered that Boerwinkle shared center with another 7-foot Bull newcomer, Dave Newmark, who grabbed 347 rebounds. Between them, the twin towers captured 1236 rebounds, a total that would have ranked seventh in the NBA.

At Tennessee, Boerwinkle was voted the best rebounder in the Southeastern Conference during his senior year.

Boerwinkle scored 781 points, an average of 9.8 a game, during his rookie season of professional basketball. With a year's experience, he's a cinch to score in double figures this year.

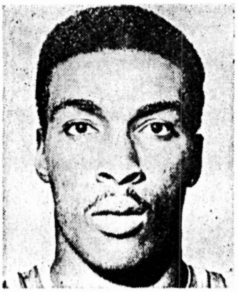
19 SHALER HALIMON 6-6 200 G AGE 24 PRO 1 YR. UTAH STATE



Shaler Halimon indicated in December of 1968 what he could do against the best competition around by scoring 23 points in one game for the Philadelphia 76ers. The Utah State grad, eighth leading collegiate scorer nationally in 1967-68, ran into a typical problem in his rookie pro season: Lack of playing time.

He appeared in 50 games for the 76ers, but saw only 350 minutes of action. He scored 186 points for a 3.7 average. But when he did get to play, he showed the talent that prompted the 76ers to make him their No. 1 draft choice in 1968. As a collegian Shaler was the third highest scorer in Utah State history with 1284 career points.

He only played two years for Utah State, spending his first two at Imperial Valley Junior College, El Centro, Calif. Halimon averaged 23.8 points a game as a junior and 26.5 as a senior at Utah State. He scored 42 points against Brigham Young. The Bulls landed him, along with veteran Chet Walker, in exchange for Jimmy Washington.

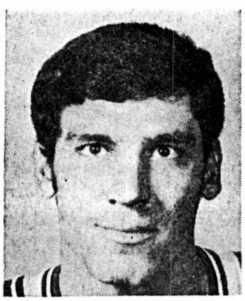
6 BOB KAUFFMAN 6-8 250 F AGE 23 PRO 1 YR. GUILFORD, N. C.



A first round draft choice of the Seattle Supersonics last year, Kauffman is a vicious rebounder, extremely strong and unusually quick. The Bulls gave up their 1968-69 scoring leader, Bob Boozer, and veteran Barry Clemens to get him. Kauffman appears worth it. Twice an NAIA All-American at Guilford (N.C.) College, he also made the Associated Press Little All-America team as a senior. Over four varsity seasons, he scored 2,570 points, a school record, and made the Carolinas League All-Star team three times. He averaged 22.7 points a game over four seasons. And he captured 1,081 rebounds, an average of 15.9 a game. As a senior, Kauffman ranked second nationally in NAIA rebounding with 698, an average of 23.3, and third in field goal pertage with a cool .712. He holds the NAIA single game accuracy record with 14 for 14 against Catawba in 1966. And he owns Guilford's single season point mark with 823 in his junior year. He shot a blazing .639 from the field over four college campaigns. He scored 641 points and retrieved 484 rebounds for Seattle last winter.

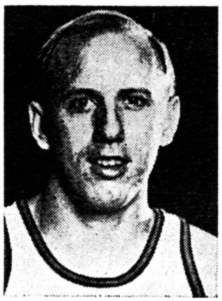
8 BOB WEISS 6-3 185 G AGE 27 PRO 5 YRS. PENN STATE



Penn State graduate Bob Weiss did most of his scoring after he joined the Chicago Bulls from the Milwaukee Bucks last winter. Weiss appeared in only 15 games with the Bucks before pulling on a Bulls' uniform. With Milwaukee he scored 99 points. With the Bulls he pumped home 407 for a total of 456 on the season.

Weiss spent two years with the Philadelphia 76ers before going to Seattle in the expansion draft of May 1, 1967. After a year with the Sonics, he moved to Milwaukee in the expansion draft of May 6, 1968.

A tenacious performer and outstanding left-handed shooter, Weiss also boasts quickness and defensive ability. He averaged 6.6 points a game last year while seeing 1478 minutes of action. He was credited with 199 assists, 172 for the Bulls.

16 ED MANNING 6-7 210 PRO 2 YRS. JACKSON STATE, MISS.

Traded to the BULLS from Baltimore for forward Al Tucker, made Manning a very happy warrior. He'll now get a chance to play regularly, and could be just what the doctor ordered for the BULLS. A fifth round draft choice of the BULLETS two years ago, this rangy forward developed rapidly and won himself a starting berth with the BULLETS. Although used only sparingly, he has won himself a key spot because of his ability to fill many roles. Considered an excellent outside shooter, Mannings' versatility has become a great asset. Despite the fact that he averaged just a little over 15 minutes playing time per game, Ed was the BULLETS' third leading rebounder, with 23 in the four play-off games against the Knicks last year. Named to the NCAA ALL-Tournament team his junior year at Jackson State. He played a key role in the Bullets stretch drive at the tail end of last season.

20 WALT WESLEY 6-11 220 24 PRO 3 YRS. KANSAS

Big Walt Wesley has been getting a little bit better each year, and the Chicago Bulls are looking for further improvement from the ex-Kansas cager this year. Obtained just before the start of the regular season in a trade that sent Dave Newmark and Norm Van Lier away. Wesley came to the Bulls as a young, yet seasoned pro. Drafted No. 1 by the Cincinnati Royals for the 1966 season, Wesley scored 314 points and pulled down 329 rebounds as a pro rookie. During the 1967-68 campaign, he scored 452 points, but his rebound total slumped to 281. Last winter, Wesley hiked both totals considerably, scoring 624 points—a 7.6 average—and hauling in 403 rebounds. Wesley didn't get too much playing time with the Royals. He saw only 909 minutes of action his first season, 918 the second and 1334 last season. He figures to play more with the Bulls . . . and do better. As a collegian, Wesley averaged 19 points a game for strong Kansas teams. As a junior, he scored 587 points and earned unanimous all-Big 8 Conference honors. As a senior, he led the Jayhawks in rebounding and averaged 20.7 points a game.

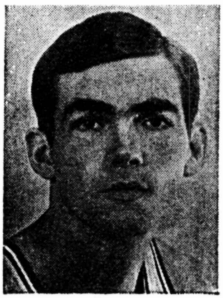
15 LOY PETERSEN 6-5 205 G AGE 24 PRO 1 YR. OREGON STATE



A quiet, inconspicuous pro rookie last year, Loy Peterson came to the Bulls unheralded and unsung, except by coach Dick Motta. "He's going to be one of our best men," Motta said, "as soon as he adjusts to pro style basketball." Motta now feels that Petersen's brief exposure to pro basketball gave the Oregon State product the necessary confidence he needs to fulfill that prediction. Not that Petersen set the world ablaze in his first pro fling. He played in only 8 games and scored 107 points for a 2.8 average. But he profited from watching the Bulls' all-star guard, Jerry Sloan, and his running mate, Clem Haskins, operate the Bulls' attack. Now he may be ready for more action. Loy was a second round draft choice last year. A star at Anaheim (Calif.) High School in his prep days, Loy set a number of scoring records and was named California Inter-scholastic Federation player of the year as a senior. At Oregon State he ranked as the fifth highest scorer in school history with a 10.6 average and captained the 1968 team.

10 BOB LOVE 6-8 215 F AGE 26 PRO 4 YRS. SOUTHERN U.

Bob "Butterbean" Love reached the Chicago Bulls by way of the Cincinnati Royals and the Milwaukee Bucks. Love played with the Royals for two seasons and posted a respectable 6.7 average. The Milwaukee club drafted him from the Royals on May 6, 1968, and he scored 107 points for them in 14 games before being traded to the Bulls.

In 35 games with the Chicago NBA entry, Love scored 180 points for a season's total of 287 and a 5.9 average. Love is capable of flashing the hot hand. Against the Philadelphia Warriors three years ago, he scored 26 points.

As a high school lad, Bob was more noted for football than basketball. But when it came time to choose his pro sport, he decided that the NBA brand of basketball was more exciting and held more promise for him.

NBA RULES

INCIDENTAL CONTACT — When 10 players are moving rapidly in a limited area, some contact is bound to occur. Contact which is entirely incidental to an effort by opponents to reach a loose ball or incidental contact which may result when opponents are in equally favorable positions to perform normal defensive or offensive movements, should not be considered illegal. Likewise, accidental contact which does not hinder the opponent from participating in normal defensive or offensive movements, and which is not the result of carelessness, is incidental.

TIME — Games consist of four 12-minute quarters. Overtime periods, if necessary, consist of five minutes.

24-SECOND RULE — A team in control of the ball must make an attempt to score within 24 seconds after gaining control of the ball. Failure to shoot within the required time will result in loss of the ball.

TIME-OUTS — Each team may take seven charged time-outs during regular playing time. One additional time-out may be granted each team for each extra period of a tie game. Each team is limited to no more than three time-outs in the fourth quarter even though they have not used their allowed four time-outs in the first three quarters. Each team must take at least one time-out in each of the four quarters. If neither team has taken a time-out during the first five minutes of each of the four quarters, it shall be mandatory for the home team to take one before the sixth minute of each. If either team has taken a second time-out before the 10th minute of each of the first four quarters, it shall be mandatory for the visiting team to take one somewhere between the 10th and 11th minutes.

ZONE DEFENSE — Not allowed.

TECHNICAL FOULS — The first unsportsmanlike act by a player or coach shall be penalized by a technical foul and a $25 fine. The second infraction by the same player or coach shall be penalized by a technical foul and expulsion from the game.

PERSONAL FOULS — Each player is allowed a total of six personal fouls before he is disqualified. A personal foul committed while in the act of rebounding and where taken there is no ball possession will be treated as an offensive foul (no shot taken) until the penalty situation prevails. The offending team will be charged with a team foul and the offending player with a personal foul. All other loose balls will be treated in a similar manner. Players no longer will be required to raise their hands after committing a foul.

OFFENSIVE FOULS — An offensive foul is to be charged as a personal foul to the player involved, but is not to be added to the team foul total for the purpose of determining bonus free throws. No free throw is awarded, and the ball is taken out-of-bounds by the defensive team. Nor are double fouls added to the team total for the purpose of determining bonus free throws.

BACKCOURT FOULS — If a team is in control of the ball in its backcourt, and while in such control, a foul is committed against a member of the team, either in frontcourt or backcourt, that foul shall be considered flagrant and penalized by two free throws.

TEAM FOULS — Each team shall be limited to four personal fouls per quarter, with each foul in excess of four per quarter to be penalized by an additional free throw. During each overtime period, the limitation shall be three personal fouls per team with an additional free throw for each personal foul in excess of three. If a team has not committed its quota of four fouls during the first 10 minutes of each quarter, and its quota of three team fouls in the first three minutes of any overtime period, it shall be permitted to incur one team foul during the last two minutes of each quarter, and last two minutes of any overtime period or periods, without incurring the penalty of an extra free throw.

FREE THROWS — If the foul committed by a player is in excess of the number limited for his team, and calls for a single free throw, one additional free throw is allowed. If the excess foul calls for two free throws as in the case of a flagrant foul, or in the case of a backcourt foul, or one of two free throws as in the case of a foul against a player in the act of shooting, the penalty free throw shall be permitted if any of the free throws is unsuccessful. Therefore the highest number of points that may be scored in one play is three, subject to this exception — if a technical foul is involved in the play, the foul try shall be attempted and does not constitute a violation of the three-point rule.

TIP-IN CHANGE — A tip-in on a missed foul shot shall be scored as two (2) points. Credit is given to the player tipping the ball.

INJURIES — When a player is injured, he must resume play or be replaced by a substitute within 20 seconds or an automatic timeout will be charged his team. Each team may take one 20 second injury time-out each half.

BACKBOARD MISS — When a shot doesn't hit the rim or backboard, any foul committed by the offensive team is an offensive foul. If the defensive team commits a foul, it is a personal foul. If the ball hits the rim or backboard, it should be treated as a personal foul, either by offense or defense.
